

A Man Scorned

A Man Scorned

It was never for the sake of bitterness
The better I became the more I opened up to her

It was never meant to be vindictive
The validation in what I offered couldn't be denied any further

It was never an eye for an eye
But your wondering ways led me down this path

It was never about your actions
Instead the principles of mockery had me shaken

It was never for the purpose of making a statement
The road ahead of me was already paved by the experience

It was never my intent to make you cry
She just happened to be there when I needed you the most

