PARTICULAR

Peculiar v Particular

It is not by my hand that my will be done, nor will it be by my courage that my affirmations see the light, for all things considered and ignored are alive in intuition.

Our occupation of this space is borrowed from the self-reflective consciousness that we are a part of. It finds the pleasure of all emotions in the experience of grand interdependence. We are here to serve its indulgence and in turn learn more about what we are and who we are not.

If consciousness is awake to itself in humankind then it loses its identity in Singularity. All things add up to the sum of the whole.
